

Problem statement Each of four real numbers is known to lie between 0 and 50. The product of these four numbers is approximated by first rounding each number to the nearest tenth (that is, to the nearest number with one digit after the decimal point) and then taking the product of these rounded numbers. Use differentials (linear approximation) to estimate the maximum possible error in the approximate product.